GRACY'S

The Hostel was built circa 1650s for the French knight Jean-Jacques de Verdelin and is an example of a Baroque Palazzo. The courtyard, in which you sit, was open to the skies and used for the stabling of horses. The Knights lived in the Piano Nobile, literally the 'noble level' the next floor up. They say if you partake in too much wine you can see Verdelin glaring down from the balustrades above, he was French after all. When the Brits arrived, they turned the Palazzo into the Civil Service Club, which is why the locals call the building l'c-Civil.
